

32 Years at Daito Bunka University:

Some Words of Advice

1. Treasure the human relationships you make at school and at work.
2. Human relations start with a simple greeting and smile.
3. Human relations grow when you learn to be a good listener.
4. Human relations flourish when you communicate face to face.
5. Try to stay calm. Anger can be one of the biggest destroyers of human relationships.
6. Be honest with people. Don't be afraid to say, "I don't know."
7. Never assume that each person you meet has similar values as you.
8. Never assume that your knowledge is superior to other people. There is always someone with more knowledge than you.
9. If you want to remember what you self-study, try studying often for short periods of time in a place that makes you feel comfortable.
10. If you want to reach an advanced level in a foreign language living in Japan, realize that it will take hundreds or thousands of hours of study. There are no shortcuts.

Words of an Indian Philosopher:

「できない」と思わず
「できる」と思えば
何でもできるのです。